

Fun and friendship on the slopes

Jon Evans, a creative director from Derbyshire describes his experience of skiing with Redpoint.

As a seasoned skier who has skied in resorts in Europe and the USA for a number of years, Jon Evans eagerly anticipates his annual trip to the slopes. A Redpoint regular, Jon has been visiting Fugen for six years having originally been recommended to use the company by a friend. He enjoyed the initial experience so much that he has since travelled with Redpoint on eight other occasions.

Jon's most recent visit to Fugen took place in February. Travelling with his partner and three other friends, it was a fun and sociable holiday, during which time the group not only managed to fit in some great skiing, but also found the time and energy to take advantage of Fugen's many bars and restaurants.

"We pretty much know what to expect when we go skiing, but this holiday really surpassed our expectations in so many ways," comments Jon. "Despite what you might read in the press about lack of snow, the skiing and the weather were great. In fact, we have always been really fortunate with the weather whenever we have visited Fugen— and of course the good company was a major contributing factor. There's nothing better than relaxing after a day's skiing in the company of friends; one of my favourite memories of the whole week was the evening we spent in the Postam après ski bar in the village, chatting and enjoying the entertainment."

Surpassing expectations

“The overall ambience of the whole week was just superb,” adds Jon. “In fact, the only problem with the holiday was coming home! Fugen is such a pretty place and the scenery is fantastic: looking down from atop Zell and the view from the Crystal Hut (or is it Kristal Hutte?) across the valleys were two of my particular favourites.”

Jon also speaks highly of Redpoint and the service they provide. “The Redpoint staff are professional, supportive, friendly and knowledgeable – second to none. I would recommend them to anybody because they offer an unobtrusive presence: there when you need them but having the empathy to know when to step back. They seem to have that X factor that many companies strive for but too many fail to attain. From initial booking right through to getting home, the Redpoint experience is second to none. A truly super company to holiday with. We will continue to ski with Redpoint as long as they keep offering us their holidays!”

Five words that Jon uses to sum up his holiday with redpoint...

“Fun,
Comfort,
Friendship,
Laughter,
Safety”
